

Mathematical Site - J.S. Milne, Personal, Top

The average annual income of leading research mathematicians (those, say, with at least three articles in the Annals of Mathematics) is about 10,000,000 USD (source).

Hint: Jim Simons

At left, with Bill Casselman and Indu Devi and Gopal Prasad, Zhejiang, July 2004.
(Photo: Prasads plus assistant.)

"Milne" is of Scottish origin, and is pronounced miln --- final e's are silent in English.
E-mail: math0@jmilne.org

Mail (both kinds) sent to me at the University of Michigan will reach me, eventually --- before sending anything to me by regular mail, check which hemisphere I'm in.

What is it I do anyway?

Bibliography

Curriculum Vita

Ph.D. Students

Mathematical Genealogy

Josef Stefan, Ph.D. Physical Institute at Vienna.

Ludwig Boltzmann, Ph.D. Universität Wien 1866.

Gustav Herglotz, Ph.D. Universität Wien 1900.

Emil Artin, Ph.D. University of Leipzig 1921.

John T. Tate, Ph.D. Princeton University 1950.

James S. Milne, Ph.D. Harvard University 1967.

Source

Photograph of John Tate and his students.

Tate's Genealogy.

Erdős number

Erdős	Erdős
(1979) F. Chung	S. Chowla (1950)
(1994) D. Mumford	J-P Serre (1966)
(1969) P. Deligne	M. Artin (1964)
(1982) J. Milne	(1976)

Overpriced Journals

Which well-known mathematics journals charge ten times more for an annual subscription than do

- Acta Math.,
- Amer. J. Math.,
- Ann. of Math., and
- J. Amer. Math. Soc.?

Click here.